

A risky situation happened a long time ago with my family, on a trip to Brazil.

Six years ago my family decided to take a cruise through Brazil and Uruguay, which sounded very exciting to everyone.

When we were already on the cruise, it had to make some stops and one was in Buzios, Brazil. When we stopped there, to get to the port of the island we had to take a short boat ride to land. Upon arrival, we spent a few hours getting to know the place, we went to some restaurants and some shops, it was all very nice. But at the moment of having to take the boat to return to the cruise, suddenly the whole sky turned gray and very dark. It started to rain a lot, thunder was heard, it was windy and very cold, and they told us that we couldn't return to the cruise until the storm stopped; but one of the workers said that there was only one boat that could reach the cruise ship, but that it was risky and that those who wanted to could go there, and that the rest wait in the place.

Me and my family decided to go on the boat and take the risk. Within seconds of being on the boat, it began to move everywhere and it was raining harder and harder. People started to freak out and we all felt like it was going to turn around as the driver couldn't see anything due to all the rain and movement. Then a man decided to climb on the roof to get a better view and hit the glass of the boat to tell the driver which way to go.

Surprisingly, this worked, and with the help of another boat coming from the cruise we managed to get there safely. We were all very scared and couldn't believe what had happened. It was an experience I will never forget.
